Christmas in the American Colonies

Tuesday, December 3, 6:00 PM

Christmas in much of Colonial America did not resemble the brightly lit festivities we have today. There were no Christmas trees, greeting cards, slick advertisements or piles of expensive gifts. European immigrants brought their religious and ethnic beliefs with them, and attitudes toward Christmas varied accordingly.

Christmas in the Southern Colonies included feasts, dancing, hunting, visiting, and church services. Decorations of winter greenery—holly, laurel, ivy, rosemary and mistletoe—added beauty to the occasion. This program opens a window into how Christmas was celebrated at George Washington's home at Mount Vernon, complete with diary entries and even the President's gift list!

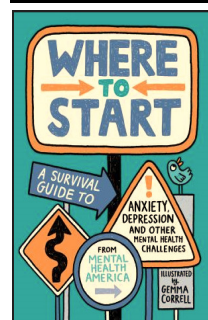

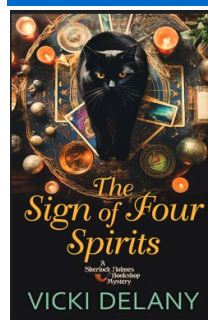

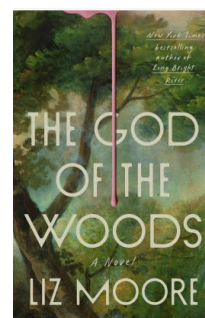

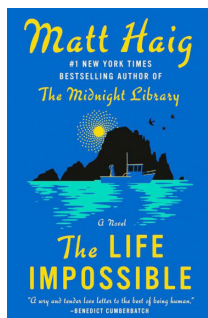

Eddie Price is a gifted Kentucky author and speaker. We welcome him back to Mary Wood Weldon Memorial Library for this festive and free event. Register at the library or online.

November 1 - December 14

The library will be collecting packages of underwear and socks to donate to local elementary schools' Family Resource Centers. Donations should all be children's sizes 4-16, new, in the package. They may be dropped off at the library during regular business hours.
